Marvin Linares created Marvin Douglas Jewelry with a simple intention—to explore Latin heritage and experience through fine jewelry. His designs combine a youthful spirit with traditional craftsmanship.

Marvin’s grandmother stumbled across the jewelry industry in the 80’s, and through the business, was able to bring his family to the U.S. from El Salvador, sparking his interest in design. Marvin worked in sales for Tiffany & Co. and as a Jewelry Specialist for Dover Street Market, but most of his design experience comes from his persistence to learn, curiosity and creative nature.

Marvin was raised in Palmdale, CA., a small desert city, and lives in Los Angeles, CA. He credits desert living with giving him the focus to perfect his craft. Marvin Douglas Jewelry has been worn on Grammy red carpets, Vogue Mexico, Playboy, Super Bowl Half-time performances, and more.

“The irony of dismantling an aged object in order to discover newness within was inspiration for this collection by taking traditional silhouettes and combining them with modern craftsmanship. Using brown, yellow, and white diamonds reminiscent of desert tones, and nugget prints resembling the character years of wear have left behind in the Mayan ruins that run through Central America. This collection embodies home and heritage for Marvin Douglas.”

Wholesale: $4,600 MSRP: $10,350

Malyia McNaughton founded Made by Malyia in 2014. The collection began with a search for the perfect body chain for a music festival. Malyia instead designed her own. Due to overwhelming requests from friends and strangers interested in her design, she began selling them on Etsy. She realized she had discovered her true passion and quit her fashion buying job to pursue her dream full time. Malyia draws inspiration from the architecture and pulse of New York City, African culture, indigenous tribal adornment, and nature.

Malyia is based in Brooklyn, NY and serves on Black in Jewelry Coalition board of directors, the first international non-profit membership association dedicated to the inclusion and advancement of Black professionals within the gem, jewelry, and watch industry.

Dorian Webb's design journey began when she was inspired by Venetian glassblowing while studying architecture at Yale. She created a jewelry collection using Murano glass and semiprecious gems and has since expanded the range. Neiman Marcus has carried her designs along with retailers in the U.S., Canada and Japan. Dorian has garnered awards including The NY International Gift Fair's Artisan's Award, the Madam CJ Walker Entrepreneur Award and as a finalist in THENEXTNOW competition for emerging jewelry designers.

Dorian lives in Oakland, CA where she contributes to her community as an entrepreneur and activist. She launched Uplift, creating pop-up stores in empty spaces for African American businesses, and writes for a regional magazine.

Jameel Mohammed founded KHIRY, an Afrofuturist Luxury Brand in 2016. Jameel's design career began after a necklace he created as a University of Pennsylvania student caught the eye of the Fashion Director of Barneys New York. He accepted an internship at the company and learned merchandising and retail buying before founding his brand. KHIRY employs the conventions of luxury fashion to make pointed statements about the value of black life and culture. KHIRY's polished and sculptural jewelry is crafted to embody the strength, beauty, power, and romance of the African Diaspora. Jameel lives and designs in Brooklyn, NY.

Constance Polamalu is the founder and CEO of Birthright Foundry, an American Samoan and a first-generation jewelry designer based in Annapolis, MD. The Samoan oratory culture running through her veins makes her a natural storyteller. Constance considers her first language to be English, her second to be Jewelry and all her designs to be stories written in metal. As a new mother ignited by the turmoil of 2020, she founded Birthright Foundry to preserve and resurrect culturally significant stories in jewelry. She also serves as Zachary's Jewelers' Chief Operating Officer and as a jewelry expert on TikTok as @constancethejeweler.

“Conceptually, Birthright Foundry is inspired by my motherhood journey and the need to preserve culture for my family in uncertain times. In my inaugural collection, I am inspired by this desire to connect with my heritage and bring where I came from into who I am today.

The Ula Nifo which takes center stage in this first collection is a modern interpretation of an ancient ceremonial necklace. Traditionally made of whale teeth, the Ula Nifo represents familial wealth which is at the core of Birthright Foundry’s mission to create lasting representation in a luxury space.”
